Understanding effective leadership development
By Hannes Leroy and Verena Ohms

Entrepreneurial networking: from uncertainty to opportunity
Chris Murray talks with Mariëtte Kaandorp

Disruptive start-ups: do they attract more funding?
By Timo van Balen, Murat Tarakci and Ashish Sood

Navigating alliances with bigger partners
By René Bakker

How companies can implement the SDGs
By Rob van Tulder

Do we really understand the numbers we receive?
By Christophe Lembregts
Understanding effective leadership development

By Hannes Leroy and Verena Ohms

Leadership has always been crucial to the effective functioning of society, and organisational performance depends in large part on the successful management of human capital. Throughout history, leadership has been vital to the fortunes of companies and entire economies alike. Yet today we face an increasingly complex world that requires leaders to deal with what we call “wicked problems” – challenges that have so many variables involved that it’s not possible to solve them with natural-born charisma or talent.

Many people still believe that individuals are born as leaders, but they’re not – they’re made. And to give this rapidly changing world the leaders it needs, we urgently need better leadership development. So how do we get better at producing leaders who are fit for purpose?

The reinvigorated Erasmus Centre for Leadership aims to do just that – contribute to the understanding of effective leadership through fundamental as well as applied research into the field, working with the RSM community internally and with external partners to produce the type of leaders the world today desperately needs. All facets of education at RSM, whether in the bachelor, master, MBA, or the school’s executive education programmes, have some form of leadership component, and we are working to energise these courses with leadership development. We are also working with external clients – organisations, large and small, profit, non-profit and governmental – to create a home for people who are passionate about leadership: a place to come together to be better leaders.

Leadership conversations
One example is our Leadership Conversations event that brings prominent academics and working professionals together to debate the big leadership challenges of the day, create effective solutions, share best practice, and enjoy what is also an excellent networking opportunity. The next event is on 10 May 2019 and we invite all who are passionate about leadership to attend.

Myth busting
At RSM, we house more leadership experts per square metre than any other leading business school and use state-of-the-art management science facilities. We know what works and what doesn’t work in the realms of leadership and leadership development. These points are made because it seems like

“We know what works and what doesn’t work in the realms of leadership and leadership development.”
Understanding effective leadership development (continued)

By Hannes Leroy and Verena Ohms

every five minutes there is a new leadership book published, and pretty much anyone can call themselves a leadership developer. From horoscopes to “feel good” workshops, strange concepts, perspectives and tools are being used in the name of leadership development, often without any scientific proof that they are beneficial. That’s why we’ve launched a leadership podcast that, similar to the popular MythBusters TV show, takes a critical approach to debunking unfounded leadership theories and myths.

Authentic leadership

One such myth relates to authenticity in leadership. Bill George, who pioneered the concept in his best-selling 2003 book, defined authentic leaders as those of the highest integrity, with a deep sense of purpose and who recognise the importance of their service to society. The idea was to hone a new generation of leaders who can learn from leadership failures that led to the corporate scandals, such as Enron’s. George’s research has shown that authentic leaders are more willing to grow and learn; and that by taking on new challenges, they become more effective.

However, many self-proclaimed leadership experts have taken George’s message out of context and fail to acknowledge that authentic leadership comes with downsides. For example, we know from various studies that feeling “authentic” is negatively correlated to being perceived as authentic. In other words, if you say you’re authentic, people tend to view you as the opposite. That can lead to you not getting...

“We want to help leaders bring their best self forward...”
Balance Track helps leaders understand how to cope with these pressures. For example, we teach leaders what science tells us about important issues connected to health and well-being, such as the optimal hours of sleep, diet, etc. We want to help leaders bring their best self forward – to run a marathon, not just one short sprint. We’re even developing an instrument that, based on heart rate variability, will send a message to the user’s smartphone to alert them if their stress levels spike out of control. Our leadership development goes way beyond simple communication.

True character
As another example, we take EMBA, MBA and executive education students on an expedition to Norway. They spend up to 12 hours a day walking through snowstorms of up to 100km per hour. In the face of all of that, their true leadership characteristics come to the forefront. This fits in with our core principle of leadership development, which is: “uncomfortable, but learning.”

These are just some of many ways we engage with and help individuals to become real leaders, and we call upon all students and professionals who are passionate about leadership to get involved and work with us on furthering leadership development.

---

Our Mission
Being a force for positive change by understanding and cultivating the next generation of successful leaders through evidence-based practices.

Our Core Values
Our center works within the spirit of the broader values at RSM:

1) CRITICAL: We critically evaluate notions of “effective” leadership and how this can be developed. As much as possible, we try to move away from ideology to what actually works – evidence-based.

2) CREATIVE: We show ourselves open to the most innovative, groundbreaking approaches to leadership and leadership development.

3) CARING: We build a caring community of leadership enthusiasts that cares about its members but also about the broader society.

4) COLLABORATIVE: The initiative is supported within the business school by relevant parties.

---

Dr Hannes Leroy is Scientific Director, Erasmus Centre for Leadership.
Email: leroy@rsm.nl

Dr Verena Ohms is Operational Director, Erasmus Centre for Leadership.
Email: ohms@rsm.nl

---

For more information about the Erasmus Centre for Leadership and the next Leadership Conversations event, which takes place 10 May 2019, visit web www.erim.eur.nl/leadership